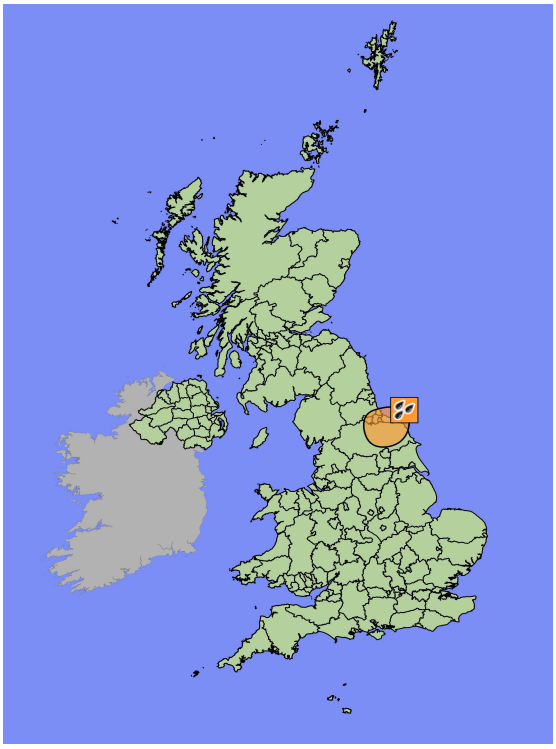
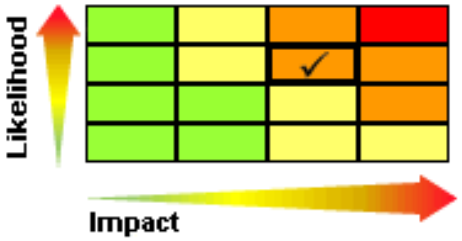
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A depression crossing southern parts will maintain a feed of moist air within a slow moving frontal zone. Through the period 50-70 mm could build up even over some low-lying areas. Rain will set in on Sunday night, though with significant totals not expected to accumulate till well into Monday morning.

The Met Office have issued an Amber Warning of Rain

Valid from 06:00 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012 until 23:00 on Mon, 26th Nov 2012

Rain persisting through Monday will allow large totals to build up across the area. The wettest period will be during the first half of the day, though rain will continue through the afternoon and evening too. The public are advised to be aware of the risk of flooding.
